This is an exciting development for us and it is very gratifying to be able to cater for the ever growing demand for Oman Air flights from France to Muscat and connections beyond.

Further good news is that Oman Air will be starting its operations to Najaf in November, and Guangzhou in December.

Another European development that we are very pleased to share is that from the end of January 2017, our twice-daily flights from Muscat to London Heathrow Airport will be operating from Terminal 4 at London Heathrow, rather than being split across Terminals 3 and 4. This will help to enhance the seamless customer experience that we are able to offer from one of the world's busiest airports.

Finally, I am hoping that many of you may have seen our commercial which has been produced by CNN. This is being aired during prime time television seven days per week and will be internationally viewed across the CNN channels by over 421 million households and hotels around the world.

I hope you enjoy it! And talking of enjoyment, I really hope you relax and enjoy our fabulous inflight service on this flight and many thanks for choosing to fly with us. We hope we will welcome you back soon.

Abdulrahman bin Harith Al Busaidy
Chief Commercial Officer

It is a great pleasure to welcome you aboard your Oman Air flight.

And on the occasion of the 46th National Day, it gives me a great honour to extend on my behalf and on behalf of Oman Air employees our sincere congratulations to His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said, coupled with our heartfelt prayers to grant Him good health, happiness and a long life.

This is a very exciting time for Oman Air; as the national carrier of the Sultanate of Oman continues to expand and invest. We are absolutely committed to the ongoing investment in the comfort of guests on board, and we were delighted to welcome and see the first of our newly refurbished A330-200 aircraft touch down in Muscat last month from Toulouse.

The comprehensive refurbishing of the Airbus A330-200 aircraft brings it into line with our latest cabin and seat designs. The emphasis is on comfort, space and providing the ideal environment in which to enjoy Oman Air's award-winning inflight service. Oman Air's new A330 Business Class cabin offers 30 seats, each of which converts to a long, fully lie-flat bed with an 82-inch pitch. The seats are fitted in a 2-2-2 configuration and, thanks to an ingenious cabin layout, provide direct aisle access for every passenger. In addition, every seat includes an electronically-controlled backrest, leg rest and seat depth features.

With the focus on France, we were also delighted to announce the increase of our five times weekly service from Paris Charles de Gaulle to Muscat, to a daily service as of the end of October 2016.

A food and wine tasting event will also be held at the Residence of the Italian Ambassador to the Sultanate, H.E. Giorgio Visetti, to launch the Week. Al Hoota Cave

The magnificent Al Hoota Cave system is located at the base of Oman's famous Jebel Shams mountain. Its entire length extends underground for over four kilometres, with 500 metres of this, together with spectacular sections of an underground lake system, now re-opened and accessible to visitors. If you're travelling to Oman, don't forget to take yourself and your family on an underground adventure of a lifetime at Al Hoota Cave.

1. Visits to the cave are done with local guides, and start with a ride on board an electric train to the entrance, followed by an exploration of the depths of the cave – where you'll get to see formations like stalactites and stalagmites, and see the well-known 'Chinese Cat', 'Old Man', and 'Lion's head' formations.
2. All of the guided tours are offered in English and Arabic, and last approximately 45 minutes.

LATITUDE: 23° 4' 52" N
LONGITUDE: 57° 21' 1" E

3. A sophisticated lighting system allows the guides to switch lights on and off as you proceed, in order to avoid disturbing any cave-dwelling flora and fauna.
4. The cave contains a rich ecosystem that includes two lakes. The main lake, which is accessible to visitors, is around 800 metres long and 15 metres deep.
5. It is in these lakes that you can observe a rare type of blind fish species, known locally as the Bu Naseh. Other species in the cave include bats, arthropods, mollusks, spiders, snails and water beetles.
6. According to the official Al Hoota Cave visitor's guide, the cave's underground caverns have been formed by the dissolution of limestone by acidic water. This process involves rainwater dissolving carbon dioxide from the atmosphere or soil, to produce a dilute carbonic acid that gradually dissolves the limestone at a rate of around 10mm every 100 years.
7. Spectacular features such as stalagmites and stalactites are formed by mineral deposits as the water moves through the cave system, with some of these having been shaped over millions of years.
8. Selfie time? Visitors will be happy to know that there is now also a special photo service at the caves, which allows you to have your photograph taken next to your favourite cave formation.
9. Along with the cave itself, there is an expertly curated geological exhibition giving visitors an insight into the geology of the region.
10. There is also an on-site gift shop selling locally made Omani handicrafts, a multi-media digital tour of the caves, and the family-friendly Midyaf Restaurant, where you can dine on locally-produced Omani cuisine.

Al Hoota Caves: Visitor's information

- The caves are open Tuesday to Sunday 9am – 6pm; Friday 9am – 12pm & 2pm – 6pm. (Closed on Mondays).
- During peak holidays periods, pre-bookings for tours of the caves are essential.
- There is parking available near the site's main entrance, as well as WiFi, and restrooms with disabled access.
- You can visit www.alhootacave.com for more information.

18 November Day: National Day, and His Majesty Sultan Qaboos' birthday celebrations

His Majesty Sultan Qaboos Bin Said's birthday celebrations take place this month on the 18 November. The day is marked as Oman's National Day – a public holiday – and a time to take to the streets with flags and banners, and song and dance, to celebrate His Majesty's life and reign over the Sultanate of Oman.

National Day in the Sultanate of Oman

This month, Oman prepares for one of their most important days on the calendar year, 18 November Day. During the days leading up to this date, His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said's image, together with the Sultanate of Oman national flag and colours, will all be on full display, along with fireworks and spectacular street light displays.

The reason is that His Majesty, born in 1940 in November, will celebrate his 76th birthday on this date, as well as his 46th year of reign over the Sultanate and its people.

A blessed birth...

As His Majesty's official website biography describes it, 'On 18th November 1940, the ancient city of Salalah whispered in the ears of close associates that a blessed birth had taken place in one of its noble houses. Oman had just received a child, his bright eyes shining with good omens, carrying the glorious future of the Sultanate in his hands.

'The birth was not at first widely reported in Oman; only close relatives and servants knew about it. However, the news soon spread throughout the country as poets came to congratulate Sultan Said bin Taimur on the arrival of his newly born son. The birth of Sultan Qaboos was perhaps the most significant contribution of his father's reign – an invaluable gift for the entire nation.'

National Day is a time for colourful celebrations throughout the Sultanate

18 November – one of the most important days on Oman's calendar

AWARDS AND ACCOLADES OF KPJ HEALTHCARE BERHAD

At a young age, His Majesty Sultan Qaboos received personal tuition from a select group of teachers and mentors (both in Oman and abroad), before heading off at a later stage to the United Kingdom in 1958 to attend a private educational institution in Suffolk, England. After this, he went to study military sciences at the prestigious Royal Military Academy in Sandhurst in 1960; before furthering his studies in the UK in other areas.

When His Majesty officially ascended to the throne in 1970, he immediately set about implementing development projects with the aim of improving his people's standard of living and transforming Oman – which he renamed The Sultanate of Oman – into the progressive economy and society that it is today. Over time, His Majesty has also ensured that Oman's rich cultural heritage has remained.

National Day festivities

Now, celebrations can be expected throughout the Sultanate's eleven Governorates, and in each of their Wilayat's (provinces). Muscat itself, as well as Salalah, will be the focal point of the festivities. For example, in the capital itself, one of the area's where one can expect huge celebrations is at Shatti Al Qurum's beachfront street.

Throughout the day and into the night, this Shatti Street will be packed with thousands of people, together with hundreds of colourfully decorated cars, which will slowly be paraded down the street, while their drivers constantly honk their horns and rev their engines. Another Muscat hotspot for festivities is the famous Muttrah Corniche, where thousands of people can be expected to turn out to celebrate their leader's birthday every year.

Other events on the go typically include Oman cultural programs, kids' festivals with live music, fashion shows, and Oman-themed fun, art gallery and museum exhibitions, military parades and food markets.

In fact, the entire country is one giant, joyful celebration – all in the name of His Majesty Sultan Qaboos Bin Said – and something not to be missed.

The magnificence and beauty of London during the Festive Season

Winter in London: Festive Season fun in the 'Capital of the World'

Although it's icy-cold and snowy outside, the winter festive season months in London are some of the most magical and unmissable. Here's what you can fill your days and nights with in the 'Capital of the World' from November until January...

'The winter months in London are when a bunch of open air ice rinks are set up across the city'

Begin with a bang!

You know when the festive season in London is just around the corner, when the night of the 5th November begins with a bang. The annual Bonfire Night – or Guy Fawkes Night – as it is historically referred to, is when the night skies explode with the sounds and sights of huge firework displays throughout the city. It's also a time to enjoy traditional Bonfire Night food and drink, alongside music, funfairs and family activities.

Winter Wonderlands

Early November also marks the beginning of London's Winter Wonderland festival, which takes place at Hyde Park from the 18th November until the 2nd January. This free-to-enter family event includes a host of Christmas-themed fun and activities, including ice skating, big top shows, an observation wheel and a huge Christmas market. At London's popular Southbank Centre, there's also a bustling market, twinkling festive season lights, and a host of fun, family-orientated events – which run from the 23rd November until the 22nd January.

Outdoor ice-skating

The winter months in London are when a bunch of open air ice rinks are set up across the city. Many are set in stunning historic and iconic locations and you and your family and friends will love a spin around some of them. Somerset House, the Natural History Museum Ice Rink, Hampton Court Ice Rink, the Tower of London Ice Rink, Winter Wonderland, and the Canary Wharf Ice Rink are the classics. Afterwards you can head to one of London's many restaurants, eateries, or traditional British pubs, where you can warm up with a hot plate of food, and a cup of hot chocolate or coffee – or something slightly stronger.

The Lord Mayor's Show

Also in November, the Lord Mayor's Show is a spectacular ceremonial procession for the new mayor. The Lord Mayor's Show dates all the way back to 1215, and every year since then, the newly elected Lord Mayor of the City of London has travelled from the City of London to Westminster to pledge allegiance to the Crown. On the day, between 11h00am and 2h30pm, around half a million people line the route to watch the colourful parade. In the evening, a fireworks display lights up the night sky over the Thames River.

New Year's Eve

In December, many of the festive events continue throughout the entire month into January, but not before the city celebrates New Year's Eve. On the night of the 31 December, London comes to life with festive season lights and firework displays – and countless New Year's Eve celebrations across the city.

2017: New beginnings

In January 2017, London will continue into the New Year with many of the festive season events and festivals, family fun fairs, and Christmas markets that have been on the go since November. But for the first month of 2017, the city also hosts a handful of cultural events that are the ideal way to begin the year.

These include the London Boat Show at the ExCeL London convention centre, from the 6th January until the 15th January, where more than 500 exhibitors showcasing the best in boat and watercraft innovations, equipment and holidays, will be on show.

New Year's Eve Fireworks

Then there's the famous London Art Fair, taking place from the 18th January to the 22nd January, which kicks off the art world year with a showcase of more than 125 art galleries, featuring museum-quality contemporary artworks and pieces from today's leading artists. Featuring works from the early 20th century to the present day, the event covers everything from photography and sculpture to painting and ceramics.

There's also the London Short Film Festival, which goes ahead from the 6th January to 15th January 2017. Now in its 14th year, 'LSFF' has been recognised as the premiere UK showcase for cutting-edge independent film. Critics have called it the 'The Best Short Film Festival in the World', and also suggested that 'Film fans who prefer multimedia thrills to multiplex fodder have flocked to this festival since its inception...'

Chinese New Year

Finally, one more festive event not to miss out on in January is the Chinese New Year celebration – the biggest celebration of its kind outside Asia. According to the Visit London guide, the Chinese New Year festivities in Central London are free to attend and usually take place in Trafalgar Square, Chinatown and across the West End.

The festive winter season could well be called the best time of the year to be in London. If you're prepared to brave the cold and get out the house – although the snow and the cold are what often make London so special at this time of the year – you're guaranteed a good time!

Travel Token: Union Jack Travel Bag

From luxury shops such as Harrods, quirky retail outlets like Dover Street Market, to bargain fashions at London's markets, big London shopping centres such as Westfield and more – as Visit London, the city's official travel guide points out – London has something for every shopper. And an official Visit London travel bag, featuring the iconic Union jack flag, is the perfect way to carry it all.

Delhi's historic Red Fort: The pinnacle of Mughal creativity

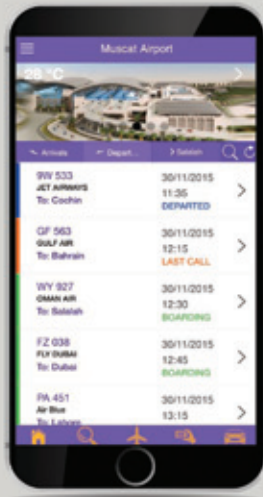

Named for its massive walls of brilliant red sandstone, Delhi's historic Red Fort is considered the pinnacle of Mughal creativity which was brought to a new level of refinement during the mid-1600s under Shah Jahan, the fifth Mughal Emperor of India – and the same emperor that built the famous Taj Mahal, in Agra.

Delhi is said to be one of the oldest existing cities in the world, with some sources estimating it to be well over 5 000 years old. There's a vast collection of historical sights to be visited, explored and photographed in and around the city, but a number one highlight – and an essential must-see item for travellers – is Delhi's historic Red Fort.

According to the UNESCO World Heritage Site guide, the planning and design of the Red Fort represents a culmination of architectural development initiated in the early 1500s by the first Mughal Emperor and brought to a splendid refinement by Shah Jahan with a fusion of Islamic, Persian, Timurid and Hindu traditions.

The entire fort is enclosed by nearly two-and-half kilometres of defensive wall, with some sections over 30 metres in height. It's an imposing structure, and along with the main Lahori gate, it gives you a sense of the strength, grandeur, and ingenuity of the ruling Mughal Empire of the time.

Growing gateways to beauty and opportunity

After paying a small visitor's fee at the entrance, you're free to head off and explore the fort's main attractions. These include the fort's walls and ramparts, the main Lahori and Delhi gates, the imperial apartments, and the Diwan-i-Aam public audience hall with its giant, exquisitely crafted sandstone pillars and arches.

One of the best times to visit the Red Fort is in the evening when there is an hour-long light and sound show celebrating the history of the Mughal culture and the significance of the fort during historic as well as modern times. But either way – during the day, or at night – any trip to Delhi would seem incomplete without a Red Fort visit.

Along with the Red Fort, historic buildings like Humayun's Tomb (with its beautiful gardens), and the 72.5 metre-high Qutub Minar, along with the more modern Lotus Temple – which has been described as 'one of one of the most magnificent monuments ever made from concrete' – are also well worth a visit.

For the traveller, Delhi is a fun and fascinating place to explore. It's a city with some of the best food and street food on the Indian subcontinent; there's fascinating displays of culture and spirituality wherever you find yourself in the city; a bustling café culture during the day, and an energetic nightlife scene at night; peaceful gardens to enjoy a relaxing walk; museums and monuments; and impressive colonial architecture.

Plus, according to a description of the city on the acclaimed World Travel Guide site, 'Many of Delhi's less-shiny areas are seeing a rebirth, with stylish new shops and restaurants cropping up in some of the least-expected places.'

Team Oman Air gear up for final push in 2016 Extreme Sailing Series

The 2016 Extreme Sailing Series is set for a thrilling climax in Sydney in December and despite 11 tough months of taxing competition, Team Oman Air has plenty of gas in the tank to make their final push for championship honours.

Oman Sail's hot shot GC32 crew, led by US sailor Morgan Larson and featuring Omani sailor Nasser Al Mashari, have completed seven of the eight Extreme Sailing Series Acts so far and have broken all records in their domination of the podium to become favourites to win the first title since the series moved from Extreme 40s to the foiling GC32s.

But with each event, rival professional teams have gained ground on Team Oman Air who made a strong start to the series at the opening Act in Muscat in March. The competition has revved up and points have been increasingly hard to come by for all the contenders, which is why the Sydney finale is destined to be a nail biting spectacle making victory all the sweeter for the winner.

For the Omanis in the team, across the boat and shore crew, the inspiration for success stems largely from their roots and their experiences from travelling the world, visiting eight different cities across three different continents every year adds depth to their celebrations on Oman National Day and their respect for Sultan Qaboos bin Said Al Said.

'Sultan Qaboos means so much to us,' said Al Mashari, whose remarkable success has been instrumental in inspiring a new generation of talented young sailors throughout Oman. 'He is like our father. In fact, if you show pictures of him to young children here, they call him Baba Qaboos and that is exactly how it feels. He has done so much to transform Oman – modernising the education system and providing electricity and water to everyone. I love to travel around the world with my job, but I love returning home more.'

Al Mashari might derive much of his motivation and pride from his Omani heritage but the interest in sailing, which he started in earnest only seven years ago came from Ahmad ibn Majid, the 15th Century Arabian navigator, cartographer and poet, who was known as the 'Lion of the Sea'. 'I was eight when I first heard about Ibn Majid and started reading his seafaring tales at school,' he said. 'I was captivated by his ocean ventures and that was when I first became interested in boats and navigation.'

That passion has served him and Oman well. In 2009 he went to work at Oman Sail and a year later was on the bow of one of the world's most advanced racing catamarans as a member of their triumphant Masirah Extreme 40 team. He has worked tirelessly over the seven years since to make sure the winning habit is maintained and now has a glittering collection of highly coveted Extreme Sailing Series championship medals to his name.

Hopefully that collection will have a gleaming new addition come December.

History-making season for Ahmad Al Harthy and the Oman Racing Team

Oman Air ambassador Ahmad Al Harthy has been flying high once again this year in the realms of international motor racing, as the 35-year-old from Muscat enjoyed another history-making season with the hugely successful Oman Racing Team.

Proudly flying the flag for the Sultanate on the grandest stage in GT racing with key support from Oman Air for an eighth consecutive year in 2016, Ahmad starred in the prestigious Blancpain Endurance Cup at the wheel of an Aston Martin V12 Vantage GT3. Joined by Aston Martin factory driver Jonny

Adam, who won his second consecutive British GT title this year, and former 24H Series SP3 Class champion Devon Modell, the trio pieced together a superb campaign to end the season just outside the coveted top three in the Pro-Am class.

Speaking exclusively to Wings of Oman, Ahmad said: 'This really has been an incredible year for the Oman Racing Team and everyone involved with the project. Our Oman Air-backed car was fast all year, extremely well set-up and engineered by the team, and Jonny, Devon and I were able to make the best use of that performance.

'There have been some amazing highlights this season and we were so close to finishing in our target third place in the Pro-Am championship in our first season in the class. Unfortunately, the final race at the Nurburgring in Germany didn't go our way but we did everything we could and I'm so proud of all we've achieved.'

Aiming to build on the strong season the Oman Racing Team powered by Motorbase enjoyed in 2015, Ahmad and his teammates eclipsed those achievements this year with some eye-catching results as the sole Aston Martin entry in the Blancpain championship.

A highlight of the season included racing to an outstanding second place finish in the three-hour Blancpain Endurance Cup campaign at Silverstone Grand Prix Circuit, which marked an historic first ever Pro-Am podium finish for the Oman Racing Team. 'It's always such a humbling feeling when the Omani flag is raised on the podium, especially in the UK as it's where I raced for many years. It was a history-making moment for Oman and a proud moment for me personally.'

Another highlight was when the team delivered a stunning performance for the biggest race of the season, and one of the most demanding races on the globe – the Total 24 Hours of Spa in Belgium – when they posted a richly deserved seventh place finish in the Pro-Am division.
